Calling all junior rangers, join us on a birdwatching adventure these school holidays! Bring your camera and see if you can photograph the shorebirds at Hunter Wetlands National Park, near Newcastle.

This experience at Stockton sandspit will fascinate, as you witness masses of shorebirds feeding and gathering along the mangrove-ringed mud flats of this Ramsar-listed site. Discover where these migratory birds start their massive journeys and their destination. See if you can spot a bar-tailed godwit, sandpipers, terns or maybe a curlew.

Come and join in some fun hands-on activities as well! It's a good idea to wear a hat and sturdy enclosed shoes, and bring sunscreen, insect repellent, binoculars (if you have them), drinking water and snacks.
